Joëlle and her family are finally going on holidays at the beach where Joëlle and her brother are planning on taking scuba-diving lessons, go to the climbing park, and enjoy as much as possible the giant waterslides of the hotel. But Joëlle's mother realizes too late that she entered the wrong address into the GPS and so the family ends up about 600 miles away from the beach hotel...

Luckily they find a picturesque hotel at the seaside maintained by the sisters Apple where they can stay for the night. But what was supposed to be a simple night turns out to be a great adventure: Joëlle realizes that the sisters are hiding something. Why does the phone at the reception ring although it is not even plugged? How can the stuffed eagle from the hotel entrance be flying above the sea at night? And why are there so many dream catchers hanging in the attic?

Joëlle decides to unravel the mystery of these two sisters and discovers much more than she was expecting not only about the hotel but also about herself...

Joëlle found out during her summer holidays what the sisters Apple are capable of: they are dream catchers, able to protect people in their village from nightmares. Joëlle has a special gift as well: she is a dream reader, someone able to free dreams and return them to their owners. Her best friend Flora is tormented by a nightmare and Joëlle will make everything in her power to help her. But nightmares are malicious and sometimes difficult to contain...
